FUTURE CHALLENGES

Chronic shortage of personnel, facilities are dilapidated and inadequate, such as modular offices used for administrative personnel and inadequate facilities, including inefficiencies of the Cottage Homes (e.g., Distance, location).

Increasing numbers of younger children and youth in need of early intervention services to better curtail or prevent these at-risk populations from entering the juvenile justice system, including the limited opportunities to cross-train personnel within the department's community-based programs, chronic shortage of personnel and lack of adequate facilities for personnel and youth.

Lack of vehicles and equipment, limited data information systems, and lack of a training academy for youth correctional staff.

OUTLOOK

Despite challenges, personnel strengths are strong teamwork and ethics along with optimism and advanced planning within areas of the department's divisions. An array of expertise combined with years of institutional knowledge drive the treatment efforts of all children and youth involved with the courts and community.

A team of workers contribute to grant writing and program proposals, such as the Capital Improvement Project funds to renovate the E-Unit to establish an in-house Drug and Alcohol Treatment Program and the Community Development Block Grant through GHURA to rehabilitate existing facilities for a new Central Regional Youth Center.

Long term plans are being drafted to address and achieve accreditation for DYA while partnerships from agencies and organizations support Systems of Care for families, training and staff development opportunities for personnel, enforcement of underage drinking activities, etc.

A New Youth Correctional Facility

A brand new facility is critically needed for the safety, security, and management of its current juvenile and certified youth population and must be conducive to their treatment and behavioral needs for effective intervention and rehabilitation, to include additional bed spaces in anticipation of Guam's population growth. The design and construction of a new 150 bed-space facility is vital for becoming an accredited institution in the future.

Administration Offices

DYA is also in dire need of permanent Class A buildings for its Administration Office, which currently consist of Buildings A, B, C, a Maintenance/Carpentry/Automotive Shop that will replace and expand the current Maintenance Shop and a new Counseling and Case Management Unit. These new buildings will include air-conditioners, typhoon shutters, generators and staff/visitors parking areas. The design and construction of a Class A Administration Building and Maintenance, Carpentry, Automotive Shop are also needed. The cost estimate is $3,000,000 however value engineering will reduce costs including construction costs as well. With poor conditions of the existing modular buildings and damages sustained from past typhoons, the replacement of these buildings is critical for the safety of personnel, protection and security of computers and other equipment, records, documents, files, etc. In addition, these buildings will no longer be able to withstand severe weather conditions and any funding source from FEMA may not be granted due to the lack of insurance coverage.

Juvenile Information System

A Juvenile Information System (JIS) is needed to upgrade its current database system. DYA is the last public safety agency to become automated. Since 1996 to present day, limited records of juveniles are kept through Microsoft Works via the Counseling Case Management Unit. This database system is in dire need of an upgrade and expansion while it has been the goal of the department to develop a uniformed database capturing information needed from within the internal and external units and sections of the department and a system of sharing specific information as authorized. Critical data are needed for client case tracking, grants, and other funding opportunities, reporting requirements, etc. DYA has submitted its grant proposal to the Department of Interior, Office of Insular Affairs to develop an automated JIS and analyze, design, program, test, update, and maintain other division/section programs, and interface with the Judiciary of Guam and the Office of the Attorney General. There is also a critical need to provide the juvenile clientele with online educational and distance learning opportunities, and expansion and upgrade of the video teleconference from its current location in the YCF to the Director's Office and Cottage Homes facilities.
